

Julian Abraham 'Togar' REXONCILIATION

Large Print Exhibition Notes

24 May – 8 September 2024

Julian Abraham 'Togar' (b. 1987, Indonesia) facilitates meandering encounters in which an ensemble of sounds and voices come together, inviting audiences to listen, talk and create sound collectively. Togar encourages us to reconcile our relationship with our surroundings by actively listening. By transforming the gallery into a social composing device, and inviting its guests to participate, Togar attempts to underscore its function with the possibilities of collective improvisation and action.

In the months leading up to this exhibition, Togar undertook a research residency in Nottingham to generate encounters, connections and collaborations with members of Nottingham's communities. The residency led to one enquiry sitting at the heart of this exhibition – what kind of hosts are we? In REXONCILIATION, this question acts as a prompt to explore a sense of coexistence, commonality and alternative ways of holding space together. At the same time, it prompts us to consider hospitable and generative ways of collective listening.

At the core of the exhibition is Togar’s ongoing OK Studio (2020 – present), an immersive sonic environment emanating from a chorus of kinetic sculptures, and automated and playable musical instruments offering audiences a space to co-experiment, co-imagine, and co-produce. At Nottingham Contemporary, Togar brings together all the past lives of OK Studio from previous presentations, while simultaneously mixing in new sounds to create an open and shared acoustic space that breathes life back into the gallery. Togar sees this act of bringing “all the works from different times, contexts, and relationships to the current OK Studio as an attempt at reconciliation.”

Alongside the components of OK Studio are a series of typographic posters and signs that play at the intersection of sound and prose. Referencing a multitude of the artist's thoughts associated with sonic culture, they fuse Togar's interests in mediation and citation, poetry and notation. Through these works Togar attempts to prod, test and defy categorisations. Moving between words, sounds and phrases, Togar explores possible alternate meanings that can be found in lagged syncopations*, amplified mistranslations and elongated pauses. As a continuation of this idea, several newly commissioned rugs designed by Togar give homage to the Indonesian writer, artist and mystical realist Danarto, whose work contributed to the field of visual acoustic poetry. References to Danarto's poetry book, Habis Tak Sudah (Over Yet Undone), can be unearthed in the design of the rugs.

A newly commissioned video work, One Jam per Week Will Do You Youth (2024) recorded in Nottingham Contemporary during the installation of REXONCILIATION, documents a rehearsal in which the Robin Hood Youth Orchestra ‘jam’ with the artist. During the session the orchestra responded to compositions created by the jamming collective Nayamullah, whose members include Togar and musicians, artists, designers, researchers, comedians and historians from across the archipelago of Indonesia. Other video works displayed on various screens and monitors include Drummer’s Gonna Drum (2017 - present) and Rocker’s Gonna Rock (2021) which highlight the artist’s considered experiments with sound and environment whilst also contributing to a sonic interplay with the kinetic elements in the exhibition.

Deriving from Togar’s ongoing work creating shared acoustic spaces, the exhibition is accompanied by a series of live events titled Feedback Loop, consisting of listening sessions, informal gatherings, performances, jam sessions and conversations. Over the course of the summer the exhibition will evolve through the participation of collectives, communities, creatives and audiences who will be invited to shape and activate the gallery, adding to the layers of sound within it. By generating a communal space where sound is the main medium and the roles of 'host' and 'guest' are intertwined and subverted, an engagement through call and response takes shape. In REXONCILIATION, words and sounds infuse into one another, and all become one continuous rhythm.

*The Merriam-Webster dictionary defines syncopation as a temporary displacement of the regular metrical accent in music caused typically by stressing the weak beat
