Melanie Mantraga work also looks at how different places and empty rooms can tell a story of who was once there.

Imagine creating a scene or a room in a space where it doesn't usually belong?

Build a garden inside your house from different objects, a chair with yellow jumpers or tights wrapped around it, or open books to create flowers.

Find big and small objects, different coloured clothes, things from different rooms that could help rebuild and tell a story of that place?

Build the challenge further, create a den inside or outside of your home that sets a scene for a story or character.

Use a bed sheet over a table or chairs, think about leaving clues about a character that help tell that story.
